Read the text and answer the questions.

- 1- Since my father died, everything has changed. We were lonely and sad. There was no laughter in our home anymore.
- 2- Although my mother was depressed, she was always there for me. She was a wonderful, supportive and generous woman. She wanted me to work hard and become a doctor.
- 3- Once, my teacher asked me to obtain my parents' signature on the maths test paper. I got a 95 % score. I went home and showed my mother the test paper. Holding the paper and checking the score, she said : "you did a good job, John!". I said : "Mum, the teacher wants your signature". She said after a moment of silence : "But I can't sign !".
- 4- It never occurred to me that Mum was not able to write even her own name. I looked at her hands. They were good at almost everything, but not writing.
- 5- I held her hands and said : "Mum, I'll teach you how to write !" She was surprised. Her eyes brightened and she said : "Good, teach me !" It only took fifteen minutes and Mum was already writing her name. I gave her the test paper and she wrote her name. We looked at the test paper and smiled. Ever since, after doing my homework, I taught Mum some new words. We brought back laughter and happiness to our home.
